

Professor Ray Barrell, born 15th May 1950, Senior Research Fellow at the National Institute of Economic and Social Research since 1990. He was a university lecturer in economics from 1976 to 1984, teaching at Southampton, Stirling and Brunel and specialising in monetary economics and econometrics. He then moved to be an Economic Advisor at HM Treasury from 1984 to 1987 before arriving at the Institute in 1988. He has worked on the financial market integration, determinants of growth, labour markets, fiscal and monetary policy, the impact of European integration, accession and expansion, and on macro economic modelling. He is a visiting Professor of Economics, Imperial College, London and was a part-time professor at the European University Institute, Florence, 1998-1999. He joined the National Institute to take over research and forecasting of the world economy, and has been responsible for building up the NiGEM model and its team. Since arriving at the Institute he has published around a hundred papers in books and academic journals, and has authored or edited a number of books and official reports, and has also regularly contributed to the forecast and policy material in the Institute Review. He has been awarded and successfully completed a large number of research grants and projects.
